strike and the results of yesterday's storm somewhat inconvenienced the work of the towboats. At the Davin Island dam this morning the water reached 6.8 feet. It was the first barge stage since July 27 and the accumulation of the entire summer's river mine output was tied up ready to be sent to the southern consumers who are anxiously waiting the arrival of fuel forwinter use. The wickets of the dam have not been lowered, and the boats were subject to the unusual difficulty of passing through the locks. Twenty minutes are required to send the two through the lock, and this added to the delay caused by the storm and the smoky atmosphere. The Twilight was the first boat to pass through the lock. It cleared at 6:15 a. m. and was followed by other craft in this order: Clipper, Robert McKinley, Little Dick, Bertha, Tornado, William G. Horner, Acorn, Olivette, Charles Jutte and Tom Lysle. Each towed five barges. In order to pass through the lock, the tows of the boats were divided, three being in front, while two were lashed to the stern. In this order about sixteen tows leave the pool to-day, taking about 1,000,000 bushels. The total amount of coal waiting to be sent out is 20,000,000 bushels. Should the anticipated rise come, every effort will be made to ship the entire quantity. Some of the boats which started down the Ohlo with the first tows will return and assist in moving those still tied up.
